Abstract

What can be considered as conductive or behavior problem, what behavior can be considered proper or improper, can we influence someone's conduct in a way that the proved behavior becomes interiorized? These are very interesting questions especially in the cases of cognitive disability. We are trying to answer these questions, as well as our goal is to identify those behaviors that are the consequences of cognitive delays from those which are due to environmental factors. In the last part of the paper we suggest ways for therapy to achieve the adequate conducts.
